BayLegal is exempt from taxation under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) and California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23701d.

Generally accepted accounting principles provide accounting and disclosure guidance about positions taken by an organization in its tax returns that might be uncertain. Management has considered its tax positions and believes that all of the positions taken by BayLegal in their federal and state exempt organization tax returns are more likely than not to be sustained upon examination. BayLegal's returns are subject to examination by federal and state taxing authorities, generally for three and four years, respectively, after they are filed.

Form 990, Part III, Line 1, Description of Organization Mission:

BayLegal's services impact clients in significant ways, including preventing homelessness, establishing safety and protection from abuse for domestic violence victims and their children, securing vital healthcare services to treat physical and mental health conditions, and securing income to provide for food, rent, and other necessities of life. Often, BayLegal is able to resolve multiple interconnected issues for families to improve their overall self-sufficiency and quality of life. BayLegal impacts the community through extensive outreach and education, technical assistance provided to other community and governmental agencies (in several counties, BayLegal trains workers at housing authorities and social service administration offices on the proper administration of their programs), systemic advocacy and impact litigation.

The following client story provides a brief example of how BayLegal's services change lives:

"For five years, my husband, four kids, and I lived in increasingly unsanitary housing conditions; but the landlord was kind to us and fair with the rent. When a new landlord took over, however, the conditions became unbearable, and he refused to address any of it.

My daughter and youngest son were hospitalized many times for severe asthma. They couldn't crawl or play on the floor because of the insects. When I tried to demand repairs, the landlord served us with a 60-day notice. He claimed there was no cause.

I was really scared and thought, 'Where are we going to go? Maybe a hotel, but it's expensive. And where am I going to take my kids?'

The first time I met my attorney, Oraneet Shikmah Orevi, was on a Wednesday. I felt relief because we sat down and she started asking me questions. She said she would help me and we scheduled an appointment at her office the following day--it was a Thursday. I had a court date on Monday, and Oraneet represented me.

It's been a year since we suffered through those circumstances, but I remember like it was yesterday. Today, it's the opposite--everything's positive. We live better. We're happy. The children are happy. I hope for them that they'll be good--that they'll be students and learn. "

BayLegal also balances its direct individual services with systemic work to address root causes of issues harming low-income residents. Low-income people do not have the time or expertise necessary to address systemic errors and inefficiencies that develop in under-resourced government agencies, or to challenge unlawful activities present in consumer, housing and healthcare markets. By working with thousands of individuals and families each year, BayLegal has intimate knowledge of the problems that cause poor people harm and impede their struggle for self-sufficiency. Systemic work, informed by BayLegal's work with individual clients, includes impact litigation, legislative and administrative advocacy, and training, technical assistance and policy development for agencies that administer housing, healthcare and benefits programs for the Bay Area's low income residents.

The following case description provides a brief example of how BayLegal's systemic work has widespread impact:

As a member of a coalition of legal aid and civil rights organizations, BayLegal sued the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) for illegally suspending the driver's licenses of low-income Californians. The Coalition brought suit after discovering that low-income Californians were having their licenses suspended when unable to pay the exorbitant fines resulting from routine traffic tickets. These suspensions happened without an assessment of the driver's ability to pay. This ongoing practice is common in California traffic courts (by the DMV's own recent estimate, approximately 600,000 Californians have suspended driver's licenses for failure to pay or failure to appear). The suit alleges violations of the drivers' statutory, due process, and equal protection rights. Although the litigation is ongoing, the DMV agreed in November 2017 to reinstate up to 400,000 driver's licenses it had suspended solely because of the driver's failure to pay a traffic ticket.

BayLegal's work is a vital part of the poverty eradication movement. Recent studies have confirmed that investing in legal services is a cost effective means of solving issues faced by low-income people. "The impact of legal aid in terms of public costs saved - homelessness prevented, health benefits secured, domestic violence harms averted, among other measures - has been documented in dozens of local and national analyses," says David Udell, director, National Center for

Access to Justice at Cardozo Law School in New York City. "The impact in terms of people's lives is immeasurable." As more communities and municipalities learn about the value of civil legal services in stabilizing the lives of low-income people, BayLegal has experienced a demand for legal services across its seven county service region. While BayLegal continues to strategically develop its program to ensure it is responsive to the ongoing and emerging needs of the diverse populations it serves, the receipt of flexible funding is increasingly important to ensure fairness for all in the justice system, and in particular for populations and communities who are not able to afford high quality representation.
